Must-read article in LE Technology Magazine

For anyone following what we do, there's a must-read article in Law Enforcement Technology Magazine over at Officer.com. They go in-depth into what we do, talk to the law enforcement that has knowledge of working with us and covers all the issues surrounding what we do, from the much-ballyhooed "entrapment" claims that the general public doesn't understand much about to what we bring to the table.

If you want to hear about what we do from law enforcement that has witnessed first-hand what we do, check out Internet Watchdogs - Officer.com. If you've ever had questions or even, gasp, uneasy qualms about what we do... well, it's the article for you.

We've been saying it for a long time and proving it even longer, our operations are professional, effective and one of a kind. Thanks to those in law enforcement for stepping forward to tell the world what it should already know: We build quality cases that stand up in court, we're professional and we work.

Why so quiet? Expansion on all fronts!

We're in a major expansion mode right now as we prepare no less than three different additions to our growing website presence, not to mention the work we're doing polishing and completing the work on our soon to be unveiled law enforcement training program. If the main page updates seem somewhat slow throughout Spring

What We Do

The Texas Border Sheriff's Coalition (TBSC) has joined BlueServoSM in a public-private partnership to deploy the Virtual Community Watch, an innovative real-time surveillance program designed to empower the public to proactively participate in fighting border crime. The TBSC BlueServoSM Virtual Community WatchSM is a network of cameras and sensors along the Texas-Mexico border that feeds live streaming video to www.BlueServo.net. Users will log in to the BlueServoSM website and directly monitor suspicious criminal activity along the border via this virtual fenceSM.

In solidarity with the Zapatistas we welcome all netsurfers to use the automated features in this FloodNet webpage to:

1. Continuously reload targeted webpages.
2. Send messages to targeted server logs.

See "INSTRUCTIONS" for 'how to' details.

Is this FloodNet working?

See for yourself. Look for visual confirmation in the bottom frame and in this frame.

1. Bottom frame: FloodNet's background applet automatically reloads the target webpage several times per minute. You should see the top of the target page in the bottom frame. The target page flashes when it reloads.
2. This frame: Click the FloodNet's upper left applet to send a message to the server error log of the targeted URL. The "personal message" form will send a message to the server error log of your choice. You should see the error message returned from the server displayed in this frame.

Why send messages to servers?

The FloodNet application of error log spamming is conceptual Internet art. This is your chance to voice your political concerns on a targeted server. You

Discussion

- Ongoing debate how beneficial these communities are for the net community
- Vigilante groups invest a lot of time and commitment to their act of civil service
- Could these vigilantes be used as a resource in the fight against cybercrime?

Conclusion

- Concerned about anonymity, camouflage their digital identities
- Misuse various vernacular online tools to gather Open-source intel.
 - Background checks from hosting providers
 - Custom software, bandwidth hogging, chat transcripts
 - Heavily crowd-sourced sting operations
- Genres of tactical artists, hacktivists or activists merge
- Often, evidence is gathered illegally or by morally questionable acts
